Striatal metabotropic glutamate receptors are coupled to G(o) proteins that are part of the inhibitory G protein system. Blockade of G(o) proteins by N-ethylmaleimide (NEM) or pertussis toxin (PTx) leads to a long-term depression (LTD) of glutamatergic synaptic transmission in the rat striatum, a phenomenon mimicked by activation of metabotropic glutamate receptors. This LTD can occur even in the presence of the N-methyl-D-aspartate (NMDA) receptor antagonist D-2-amino-5-phosphopentanoic acid (D-AP5) in the local superfusion of the striatum. The effect of D-AP5 on the LTD, however, depends on the presence of G(o) protein. In addition, the activation of the metabotropic glutamate receptors has the same effect on LTD as activation of the alpha-amino-3-hydroxy-5-methyl-4-isoxazolepropionic acid (AMPA) receptors. This implies that the LTD elicited by metabotropic glutamate receptors is presynaptic and likely to be due to a loss of postsynaptic AMPA receptors. In addition, D-AP5 does not affect the steady-state levels of glutamate release and depression induced by subsequent activation of NMDA receptors, suggesting that the LTD is not due to a desensitization of postsynaptic NMDA receptors. In contrast, a D-AP5-induced LTD is not observed in the presence of PTx, suggesting a role for G(o) proteins in the elicitation of this LTD. Finally, blockade of the metabotropic glutamate receptors by NEM in the presence of D-AP5 prevents 3e33713323
