Biostatistics, from Greek bios, life and statos, status, is a branch of medicine that deals with the scientific study of living organisms. The term 'biostatistics' was first used in 1689 by Louis B. Selden, an English physician and scholar, and in 1819 by William W. Hunter, an English surgeon, when both are discussing population studies. Topics that are within the area of statistics are actuarial science, economics, epidemiology, genetics, health care administration, health economics, mathematical biology and biostatistics. A biostatistician is a person with knowledge and skills in these areas. The major professional organisations for biostatistics are: the American Statistical Association (ASA), the Royal Statistical Society (RSS), the European Society for Biostatistics (ESB), the Biometric Society, and the Canadian Society for Biostatistics (CSB). The list of biostatisticians is published by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) as part of its "Who's Who in Public Health."
