To organize your image library, use Adobe Bridge (found on the Photoshop menu). The following sections walk you through the basic functions of the tool. To learn more about specific functions, see Part III.

Creating a new file Photoshop is a program that is often used to open source files (those created with other programs) and make minor changes or modifications. You need to create a new document to do this. Most likely, you use Photoshop's New tool, found on the File menu at the top of the workspace window. When you use the New tool, you have a number of options. To quickly create a new document, type a number in the New Document dialog box at the top of the workspace window. In the following example, you can use the document name of figure 8-9 (boston_0101), and set the Width to 610 pixels and the Height to 590 pixels. This dialog box allows you to choose between several predesigned types of documents, such as RGB Color, Grayscale, Indexed, and CMYK. Create a new document using the New Document dialog box. To change a document, use the New Open dialog box, as shown in figure 8-10. (Choose File⇒New Open to open the box.) You have the option to use an existing file as the basis for the new document or to create a new document using the New Document dialog box. Figure 8-9: Create a new document using the New Document dialog box. Figure 8-10: Change the settings for the new document. Before you can select a new document, you must add a new layer that represents the background in your design. You can add a new layer by pressing Ctrl+Shift+N on your keyboard or by choosing Layer⇒New Layer. If you click OK in the dialog box, you see the screen shown in figure 8-11. You can see that the background is gray; it has a Fill layer so that you can change it to an image or color. Figure 8-11: Create a new document with a background. Next, you need to add at least one layer of color, bitmap, or text to the document. Choose Layer⇒New Layer. You can also add a new layer by pressing Ctrl+Shift+N on your keyboard. Add a new layer

What's New in the Adobe Photoshop 2020 (version 21)?

Antibody cross-reactivity to human antithrombin by commercially available sera. Although the cross-reactivity of antibodies to human antithrombin (hAT) by commercial reagents has been reported, the results have not been consistent. The present study sought to evaluate the cross-reactivity to hAT between commercial antibodies using microtiter enzyme-linked immunosorbent assays (ELISAs). The antibodies included those from Behring, TiaDia, NIKKEN-Biorex, Biorad, Bio-Rad, DiaSorin, BEI, HyTest and DiaPharma. The antigen used to detect antibodies was purified hAT (NIKKEN-Biorex). The antibodies from Behring, TiaDia, NIKKEN-Biorex, Biorad and DiaSorin exhibited no cross-reactivity to hAT. The other antibodies cross-reacted with hAT. Antibodies against hAT were detected in sera of 27 of 31 patients in the Behring, Biorad and DiaSorin groups. Among the cross-reactive group, the results of Behring, Biorad and DiaSorin, and those of Biorad and DiaSorin correlated with each other (Spearman rank correlation test:  $R = 0.864$ ,  $P < 0.001$ ). What did Cathy say? The title says it all. This is a puzzle I'm working on for a friend (who didn't specify any rules), but I guess the rules are pretty obvious: You will have a conversation with a friend where you can hear only the last utterance she makes, and each time the last utterance changes, you'll have to write a different (but always related) word on this post, except for the first time, when she said the first word. So in this puzzle, Cathy will be the last person to make an utterance. The final word will
